

GENEVIEVE DEVINE

Feral muse is an idea that describes the untameable and elusive spark of inspiration in life and art that comes and goes as it pleases. This collection and the accompanying film is both an exploration and an outcome of my relationship to it.

An experiment in indulging my process driven approach, it was driven to an extreme as I allowed the threads to be woven and cut at the whim of my amor fati.

Continuing to tease the boundary between fashion and objet d'art, this collection deepens and matures my practice of salvaging and celebrating the past lives of the material, as I spin golden yarns from dry grass.

The feral muse is our wildest, freest self. Unencumbered by doubt she forges ahead sparkling in the dark. I grip tightly to those brief glimpses, abstract visitations as she edges closer still. We perch wrapped in silks, rapt in anticipation.

Piecing together disparate elements with swift design, she brings me silks as I gather trinkets and shiny objects to better reflect the light. Draped in adornments and dancing amongst the shape-shifting echoes and warped reflections, we revel in our asymmetry.

With a gestural and urgent application, anarchic forms are bound in beautiful stitches, twisting and turning until they please us. Antique scraps draped over our shoulders as we sail towards the morning. Play is the order of the night, tension released, there are no handbags at dawn!

Having embroidered the heavy cloth of night with our reverie, beads of sweat become pearls in the glistening darkness as she is I and I is she.
